

The new edition has been updated and expanded with two additional lessons on the Taiwanese economy and the varied ethnic groups of Taiwan, giving students an even wider perspective on Taiwanese society. Also included are revised audio recordings, available as free downloads with purchase of the textbook, that include hours of texts, vocabulary, grammar and exercises, entirely spoken by native speakers. The addition of a Bopomofo-Pinyin conversion chart and the book's fresh, new look further enhance this latest edition.

With coverage that includes topics such as cross-strait relations and the role of women in modern society, along with broader themes such as marriage, food and religion, students can get a better sense of both the society of contemporary Taiwan and China as a whole. Lavishly illustrated throughout with numerous photographs, diagrams and drawings, Taiwan Today goes beyond just the study of a language toward an understanding of a culture and its people.

Developed in accordance with the ACTFL National Content standards, Flying with Chinese is the first K-6 Chinese language learning series created by a team of Chinese language experts and established professionals in the field of K-8 world language education. The result is an integrated, communicative approach, with oral and literacy targets included and assessed throughout the series.

Flying with Chinese clusters around three themes: global citizenship, cultural heritage, and environmental responsibility. Each volume introduces legends, real and fictional characters of importance to Chinese culture, and significant Chinese customs and celebrations. Depending on the time available for instruction, a program may choose one or any combination of the A, B, and C series, providing flexibility for the different needs of mainstream, immersion, and heritage school programs. Each lettered series is independent but also interrelated to the others.

Now available from the exclusive distributor, Cheng & Tsui, Grade 4 of Flying with Chinese continues the series with an increased emphasis on writing. While the focus in earlier years is on oral skills, the written language comes to the forefront in Grade 4. A multi-channel approach ranging from Total Physical Response activities to the use of Chinese-language signs in the classroom makes it possible for students to acquire between 90 and 130 characters per year in Grades 4-6.

Aside from the textbooks themselves, Grade 4 also features all of the supplements that make Flying with Chinese such a comprehensive set of tools for younger learners. Each text is accompanied by a workbook, student audio CD, flashcards, teacher's guide, and teacher's audio CD that provide ample additional activities, rubrics, and information on how to encourage parental involvement as part of the language-learning process. When coupled with guided language practice in the classroom, Flying with Chinese is the perfect solution to your elementary instruction needs.
