To receive further and detailed information about the 8th International Conference, those teachers and scholars outside Mainland China (including Hong Kong, Macao, and Taiwan) who intend to attend the Conference should fill out the Attendee's Form by October 31, 2009 or right now online at <http://www.quia.com/sv/332318.html>.

Those who intend to present a paper at the Conference should submit a one page abstract online before December 1, 2009. The paper abstract submission website address will be announced in the next announcement. The reviewing team formed by the Organizing Committee members will review the paper abstracts anonymously and will also notify the paper abstract submitters of the status of their paper abstracts by January 31, 2010.

Those whose paper abstracts are accepted will need to submit their completed papers (no more than 4 pages) by April 1, 2010 in order to be included in the conference proceedings and to be selected for a selected edition of conference papers. The Conference Committee reserves the right to review a completed paper again if it is drastically different from its original paper abstract. The paper format and style requirements and the information on conference fees and hotel rooms will soon be provided at the 8th International Conference on Chinese Language Pedagogy website: www.uvm.edu/~chinese/conference2010
